1. Szpital Naczystem, officially named Hospital No. 2, is located on Ulica Dworska. It was formerly located on Ulica Wolska and known as Szpital Wolski. The hospital has from 1,400 to 1,500 beds and has departments for internal diseases, gynecology, laryngology, neurology, children's diseases, venereal and skin diseases, surgery, X-ray, autopsy, and laboratories. It is the largest hospital in Poland and is headed by Dr. Stodrowski. Approximately 50 physicians, 100 nurses, and 45 administrative employees make up its staff.
2. Szpital Przemienienie Panskie, officially named Hospital No. 4, is located in the Praga district of Warsaw. It has from 500 to 600 beds and has departments for internal diseases, children's diseases, gynecology, X-ray, autopsy, and laboratories. Dr. Niemirski (formerly Zellmeister), the director, is a gynecologist and a devoted Party member. The administrative staff numbers approximately 30.
3. Szpital Zakazny, officially named Hospital No. 1, is located at 35 Ulica Wolska. It was formerly known as Szpital Swietego Stanislaw. It is the only hospital in Warsaw for infectious diseases and can accommodate approximately 1,000 patients. Although it is always full to capacity, patients who need hospitalization are admitted even if additional beds have to be set up in the corridors.
4. Szpital Na Zoliborzu, officially named Hospital No. 7, is located on Ulica Zoliborz. It has approximately 300 beds and has all departments except those for tuberculosis and other infectious diseases.
5. Szpital Dzieciatka Jezus is located on Ulica Nowogrodzka. It has approximately 800 beds and has the same departments as Szpital Naczystem, with an additional department for tuberculosis examination. Patients whose tests prove positive are sent to the tuberculosis hospital at Otwock.
6. Szpital Obrony Narodowej, reserved for high officials and officers above the rank of major, is located on Ulica Koszykowa. It has approximately 400 beds
